Reviews

«The most difficult thing in court is to prove that you are fleeing persecution for your opinion, and not from military service or mobilization. The United States considers the right to mobilize people during war to be a legal right of the state. And thanks to your conclusion, I was able to prove to the prosecutor even before the trial, that in Russia the military conscription is part of repressive legislation and persecution for political opinion. As a result, I was approved for asylum in the United States»
